WOODLAWN RACES.

FOURTH DAY—A STILL larger attendance was present at the races today. The horses were in excellent condition and the races were very interesting.

WOODLAWN RACES.

The success of the spring meeting at Woodlawn is assured beyond any kind of doubt. So far the average attendance has been unparalleled. A still larger attendance is expected for the remainder of the season.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Every stand was crowded, and the ground within the quarter stretch was peopled as it was never before known to be. This great multitude was attracted thither by a series of incidents.

WOODLAWN RACES.

In the first place, the weather had undergone a favorable change. A refreshing and continuous breeze blew all day, and so attempted the world-beating race of the sun that little real discomfort was felt by any of the visitors.

WOODLAWN RACES.

The promise of extra good racing was the great incentive to most of those who went out. There was a general anticipation and prophesy that in one or both of the races the heats would be broken.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Neither the prophets nor anticipators were in error. The heats were broken in each of the races, and the excitement was intense. A day's sport of more absorbing interest probably never occurred on the turf in this country.

WOODLAWN RACES.

In view of the immense crowd of spectators, many of whom were ladies and many gentlemen from distant States and cities, we esteem it peculiarly fortunate for the Association and for our home people in general.

WOODLAWN RACES.

The trials of speed were so nicely discriminated and fought with such genuine amusement. One and all who witnessed the sport evinced the keenest appreciation of its energy and fairness.

WOODLAWN RACES.

The greatest activity prevailed among the pool-betters and side-betters and "lookers-on" prior to the opening of the ball. In fact, we do not remember ever to have seen so much impatience displayed on the eve of a race.

WOODLAWN RACES.

The assembled thousands were waited by a long wait. They had not more than time to cast about them for an understanding of the "situation," deposit their bets, bid for their pools, and square themselves for a good view of the race, before the horses were called for the start.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Out of the sixteen entries only four started—Ford's bay colt, Clay's Plantagenet, Stuart's bay colt, and Harper's Style. Clay was the favorite by two to one, Harper, Ford, and Stuart being chosen in the order named at the pool sales.

WOODLAWN RACES.

The backers of Clay, Harper, and Ford were particularly anxious to trip the favorite, and the race was a very close one. The horses were mounted for the start, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

First Heat—An even start was made, but in going under the string Harper took the lead, Ford, Stuart, and Clay lengthening out after him, and so rushing on past the quarter pole. Ford now fell back and Stuart took his place next to Harper, keeping Clay in the rear.

WOODLAWN RACES.

The run for the half-mile post was intensely exciting, and the horses were mounted for the start. The race was a very close one, and the horses were mounted for the start.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Second Heat—The friends of Harper multiplied with amazing rapidity. He became the favorite by great odds, and was so freely given on Clay before the start. The race was a very close one, and the horses were mounted for the start.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Third Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Fourth Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Fifth Heat—Such a dwindling! Four of the gallant starters had fallen from their high estate. The contest was narrowed down to the well-matched Extra and Little Mack. The race was a very close one, and the horses were mounted for the start.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Sixth Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Seventh Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Eighth Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Ninth Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Tenth Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Eleventh Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.

WOODLAWN RACES.

Twelfth Heat—This was the interesting crisis. What commensurate there was! Did you ever? We believe not. Harper's friends were sadly cast down, and poor Clay had a friend to cheer him in the hour of defeat. Ford's backers exulted, and went for the conquering steed heavier than ever. Precious time was lost, and the race was a very close one.
